

March 16, 2020 update

Dear clients, colleagues, and business partners,

Given the developments over the last week, at the end of last week, and effective today, we have made the decision to transition our office to a remote work approach. While this is the case for most employees, for the trading and operations team we have implemented a two-week rotational shift approach. Furthermore, we are asking all employees not to travel for work or attend any meetings, conferences or large gatherings, and we have also encouraged all our employees to personally follow prevailing social distancing best practices.

This approach is designed to support our purpose of delivering investment success to our clients by being able to continue to operate effectively, to support the health and safety of our employees, and to do what is right as a citizen of this world by doing our part to try to control the spread of this virus. Given our testing last week, we are confident that we can continue to provide the same level of services to our clients using this remote work approach.

As the markets have continued to experience a much higher level of volatility, we remain focused on our purpose of delivering investment success, and to our vision of expanding the way the world invests through the power of diversification. It is times like these that demonstrate that power. I am proud of our team and how they have risen to this challenge, and to the value we have delivered to our clients.

Warmly,

Duncan B.E. Wilkinson
